Web Design

Web design is the process of conceptualization, planning, modeling, and execution of electronic media content. This is delivered via Internet by using technologies that can interpret and be displayed in a web browser or other graphical user interfaces (GUIs).

- Static pages don't change content and layout unless a programmer manually updates the page.
- Dynamic pages adapt their content/appearance depending on the end-user's interaction. Content can be changed on the end-user's computer by using client-side scripting languages such as JavaScript, JScript, Actionscript, media players and PDF reader plug-ins, etc. Content is often compiled on a server with server-side scripting languages (PHP, ASP, Perl, Coldfusion, JSP, Python, etc.). Both approaches are used in complex applications.

Facts

There are now over one Billion Internet Users. This number is growing rapidly.

Each month the average user visits 59 domains and views 1,050 pages.

"It took 38 years for the radio to reach 50 million users, 13 years for TV, and only 5 years for the Internet".

CyberAtlas.com

"What will this baby be like in a 100 years?"
